Kia ora!

Welcome to Southern Discoveries.

Our mission is to take guests further, closer and deeper into Fiordland, with the local knowledge, care and personal attention that define Southern Discoveries.

As Milford Sound's original cruise operator, we've been perfecting incredible Fiordland experiences for 70+ years. This includes unforgettable journeys on the fiord and memorable ways to get there.

We're locally and family-owned.

Kaitiakitanga (guardianship) of our unique environment and manaakitanga (hospitality and respect) of our guests are core to our company values. We celebrate living our values and receiving Qualmark Gold for all our experiences in Milford Sound, which recognises outstanding customer service and sustainability practices.

We're proud to partner with the Department of Conservation to fund the Cleddau Trapping Project, a long-term conservation programme working to protect the precious native species and ecosystems that make Milford Sound so extraordinary.

Go further, get closer and discover more with us.

There are few places as powerful as Milford Sound and Fiordland, and experiencing them well requires deep respect for the landscape and local knowledge. From the moment you set out, the scale and grandeur of the landscapes are revealed, our role is to help guests discover them with care, respect, and delight. Over more than seven decades, we've learned that how you travel matters just as much as where you arrive.

Today, we offer more ways to discover Milford Sound than ever before—from cruising the fiord itself to combining it with the world-famous Milford Track, or choosing to arrive by coach, small-group vehicle, plane or helicopter. Each option offers a different perspective, yet with the same depth, expertise and attention to detail.

As a locally and family-owned company, we're deeply connected to the places and communities where we operate. Our commitment to conservation and guardianship underpins everything we do, ensuring Milford Sound remains just as powerful and humbling for the next generation as it is today.

CONSERVATION

The Cleddau Trapping Project

Protecting Fiordland's most treasured species.

Not far from Piopiotahi Milford Sound, the Cleddau Valley is one of Fiordland's most important wildlife sanctuaries. Southern Discoveries is proud to partner with the Department of Conservation (DOC) in a long-term trapping project designed to protect threatened and taonga species that call this unique environment home.

Part of DOC's Northern Fiordland Whio Security Site (one of eight high-priority conservation areas dedicated to protecting whio/blue duck in New Zealand), the Cleddau Valley is a remote and ecologically significant landscape. The Cleddau Trapping Project targets predator control to help restore natural balance and enable native species to recover and flourish in one of the country's most remarkable valleys.

The species that call Cleddau home

The Cleddau Valley is one of the few deer-free valleys in Fiordland and, as a result, supports a dense, healthy understorey that provides vital habitat for native wildlife.

- Species found here include whio (blue duck), Fiordland tokoeka (kiwi), kea, rock wren (pīwauwau), kākā, mohua and pekapeka (long-tailed bats)
- Predator control targets species we want to keep out of the Cleddau Valley, like stoats, rats, possums, and rabbits

Boots on the ground: Conservation in action

Southern Discoveries' long-term sponsorship of the Cleddau Trapping Project will help support hands-on predator control across the Cleddau, Tutoko and Gulliver catchments. Funding supports:

- trap management and setting new trap lines
- helicopter access for fieldwork
- fieldwork in remote terrain, including specialist dog handlers

Data from comparable Fiordland valleys shows this kind of work can significantly improve whio breeding success, boost rock wren populations and improve kiwi chick survival. When possible, Southern Discoveries team members also help with checking trap lines and sharing stories about our native species.

How your journey helps protect Fiordland

Every journey to Milford Sound helps support conservation efforts in Fiordland. By travelling with Southern Discoveries, guests directly contribute to predator control work that protect native wildlife and help preserve this extraordinary place for future generations.

QUEENSTOWN
Wine Tour

Scenery is better with wine.

Take a journey through Gibbston Valley wine country. We'll introduce you to passionate cellar door hosts and their award-winning wines in a relaxed, intimate tour. Here, the beautiful Central Otago scenery is more than a photo opportunity; it's what makes these wines extraordinary. Each winery has been chosen for its world-class varietals, passionate winemakers, and connection to the legacy of Central Otago viticulture.

Chard Farm, Waitiri Creek and Brennan Wines in Gibbston Valley and Nockie's Palette in Arrowtown are each boutique cellar doors widely recognised for their exceptional production of Pinot Noir and other Central Otago wines.

On some occasions, these wineries may not be available, however the alternative will also be sure to delight.

Why choose a Queenstown Wine Tour?

- A small and sophisticated wine tour ideal for true wine enthusiasts
- Visit four boutique Central Otago cellar doors, each celebrated for their distinctive wines and unique character
- Experience 20+ premium wine tastings
- Friendly, knowledgeable guides throughout your experience
- Savour a light platter during the tour
- Travel in a Mercedes Sprinter equipped with free Wi-Fi
- Private charter options available
